TORBELLINO is an interactive installation and a collaboration between MIRA festival and the Master's Students from the Interaction Design and Extended Reality Program at IED.

The installation will take place at MIRA festival November 7th and 8th at the Fira Montjuic in Barcelona

Barcelona, 1 October 2025. - Barcelona's Istituto Europeo di Design (IED) is empowering students to exercise their creative design skills through a collaboration with MIRA festival. MIRA is a digital arts and contemporary music festival held annually in Barcelona since 2011, with two international editions in Berlin (2016 and 2018). Focused on the intersection between art and digital culture, the festival features a carefully curated program including live audiovisual shows, concerts, immersive installations, performances, 360° screenings, DJ sets, and talks.

Torbellino is a project that asks: How can we move beyond the reduction of the forces of our natural world to the mechanical binary of ones and zeros? How might we honor their complexity with a return to something more human? An interactive installation and visual spectacle, Torbellino invites participants into a sensory space where the invisible becomes perceptible. Through fabric, airflow, and interactive light, the work makes unseen energies tangible. As visitors move through the space, delicate wisps of fabric brush against them, phantom traces of energy once unnoticed and now revealed.

This encounter raises questions: What does it mean to feel the presence of the unseen? What reflections emerge when we step into the wake of lingering energies, of past people, or of former selves?
